

Morals in America

Integrity
Ethics
Honesty

Integrity: To me, a person of his/her word is worth their weight in gold.

One thing I am a strong advocate of is extending expectations we want onto other people. If I expect something of someone I should give that same opportunity to the other person.

In essence, the idea of accepting the consequences of actions is very important to understanding humanity. How can we demand that society exercise humanity if we do not understand or exercise it ourselves.

Critically thinking about one's own actions in relation to their life and relationships with other people brings tremendous insight to our own ideas of humanity.

Thinking critically about self-evaluation will reflect an actualized image of the common good one person at a time.

Humanitarian efforts, produce more caring, giving people. The vast amount of poverty in our country is sickening.

APPRECIATION AND RESPECT.

Moral fabrics of our society are gone, and need to be instilled in the future.

Abortion

Women's right to choose.

Abortion: Consideration of the mother vs. consideration of the child

Abortion: If it should be legal and if so, until what point in the pregnancy and under what circumstances it should be allowed (i.e. only in the first trimester, only in the second trimester, only if the woman is a certain age, only if the woman has health problems or was raped, etc.).

Every aspect of death (not just "death")

Death: So-called "right to die." Will people end up being forced to use this "right" against their will?

Euthanasia

Animal Testing: When is it worth it? Standards for humane treatment?

Animal rights are important (not just animal testing).
